

Specialised practical guide

1 Let's get in gear!

Travel the way you want to, with no reservations or time limits, changing your destination as you go, with no delays. Get a whole lot more out of the company of family and friends, and meet people with the same interests, with everything you need at arm's reach. Goodbye stress, goodbye deadlines. Can you imagine it? Welcome to motor home tourism, it's more a way of life than a way to travel.

With this unique experience you'll be able to choose your destination and spend a sustainable and environmentally friendly holiday there, far away from the crowds and surrounded by the colours and smells of each season of the year. You'll discover places off the beaten track, fall in love with landscapes beyond your wildest dreams, and directly experience local customs and traditions. Swim in hidden bays or do something as simple, and as beautiful, as delight in the view of the snow from the comfort of your motor home while you have a coffee, surrounded by the peace and quiet you've always been seeking.

Andalusia offers you endless opportunities to make your holiday an unforgettable one. But don't forget the basic rules for an environmentally aware camper: care for your surroundings and don't leave a footprint, respect the environment and don't leave litter, respect your neighbours and local traditions, pay attention road traffic regulations and only stay overnight in permitted areas. Ready? Let's go!

5 Unexpected Andalusia

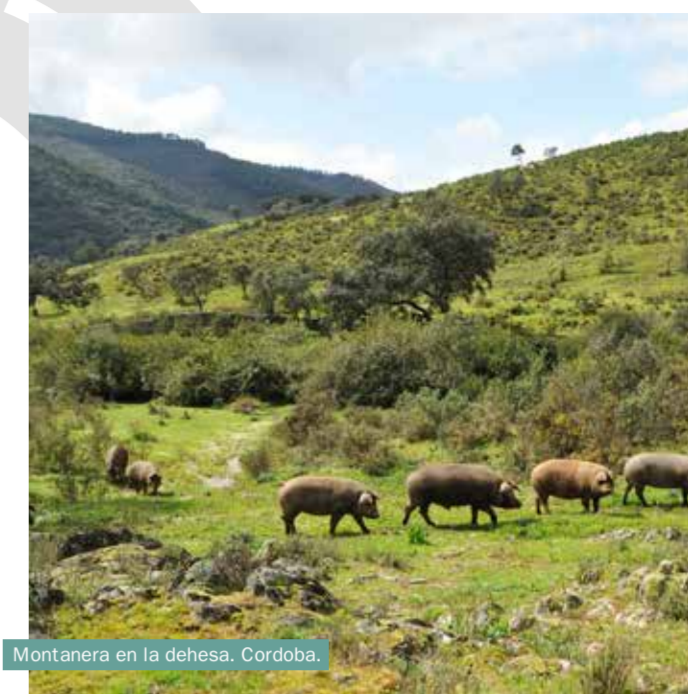

Tourism in a motor home lets you discover places far away from the crowds of tourists, but which are no less beautiful or interesting for being off the beaten track. Unexpected places that promote sustainable, high-quality tourism, with a hidden heritage, fascinating natural settings, landscapes shaped by tradition and a cuisine full of delicious surprises.

Travel through time to see the 'Most Legendary Andalusia', and discover how the region was shaped by the Argaric culture, Tartessians, Iberians, Romans and Andalusies, at sites such as the Dolmen de Soto (Trigueros), Castellón Alto (Galera), Tejada la Vieja (Escacena), Baelo Claudia, Itálica and the Villa de El Ruedo (Almedinilla), with experiences related to mythology, theatre and archaeo-gastronomy. Form part of the legends of authentic 'fairy tale villages', visit the castle of La Tragantía (or la Yedra), in Cazorla, wander through the narrow streets of Vejer listening to the songs and legends of the town or marvel at the underground streets of de Soportújar, the village of witches.

And what better way to end the day than gaze at the stars. Andalusia is a wonderful window onto the Universe thanks to its large natural space and the great sensitivity and care taken by local towns and villages, which are excellent spots for star gazing thanks to the lack of light pollution. Is there anything better, or more different, than an open-air dinner on a warm summer night and contemplate the stars?

6 Immersion in local life

Caravanning opens you up to a less invasive and more human type of tourism that encourages cultural exchange and brings travellers closer to local customs and traditions. It's not hard to find local artisans working in their workshops and participate in their work: ceramics, forges, esparto grass or leather. Or, depending on the season, you can "shepherd" a herd of Iberian pigs during the montanera (the acorn grazing season), form part of the transhumance of the sheep of Segura, head off to the forest to pick mushrooms, sample an excellent extra virgin olive oil, gather chestnuts or join in the fun at the wine harvest festival. After picking the grapes. While you're there, take the chance to buy local ecological products and help the local economies. And if what you like is total immersion in an agro-tourist experience in a rural setting, participate in cheese making, knead local bread and collect honey. Or simply sit back next to a cottage or a bench in the local square and listen to the tales, the stories told by the older residents of the village.

7 Family adventures

There's no need to pack or unpack, you've got everything you need to be totally independent. You don't have to depend on strict timetables and you can improvise whenever you need to. All this makes tourism in a motor home ideal for travelling with the kids. Time for some adventures!

Conquer epic castles, like Almodóvar del Río or Baños de la Encina; explore the Cave of Nerja or the Cave of Las Ventanas (Piñar) or the Grotto of the Marvels; walk along fairy tale paths, such as the Bosque de las Letras of Santa Ana la Real; and live the life of a cave dweller in the prehistoric village of La Algaba (Ronda). Experience an open pit mine and take a trip on a train of the period at the Mining Park of Riotinto, whet your appetite for knowledge at the Parque de las Ciencias de Granada feel like a real cowboy at the Wild West Town of Oasys de Tabernas.

All kinds of zoos, aquariums and botanical gardens are there to immerse all the family in the natural world. And lots of fun is guaranteed at the best theme parks, such as Isla Mágica, and very special getaways such as the Aldea Azul de Júzcar, the Cave of Los Cuentos (Cúllar) and the Sendero de los 3 Cerditos of the Sierra de Aracena.

8 The end of your trip

If your holidays in Andalusia are over, we're sure you want to come back for more. Don't think twice, we'd love to see you back on the road at the wheel of a motor home and enjoy a holiday in our region as much or even more than the last time. Just one thing: if you do come again, bring another caravanning lover and discover Andalusia together.

Nerja, Costa del Sol, Málaga.

There are beautiful coastal routes that go from the Mediterranean to the Atlantic. There's everything here to delight caravanning lovers that come to Andalusia in search of infinite beaches, crystal clear waters, adventure sports, evenings at beach bars, delicious cuisine and sunshine all year long.

The Costa de Almería, Costa de la Luz, in Cadiz and Huelva, the Costa Tropical, in Granada and the Costa del Sol, in Málaga, add up to 1,100 kilometres of coastline full of beaches where you can disconnect and relax, enjoying the natural surroundings. Or perhaps you prefer marine activities: kitesurfing in Tarifa or scuba diving at the Cabo de Gata-Níjar surrounded by an incredible forest of sea grass.

And if you like the idea of immersing yourself in the atmosphere of the regional coastal fishing villages, you can visit the auction halls where fresh fish straight off the boat is sold, and participate in an auction. Or you can experience at first hand the ancient art of the almadraba (tuna fishing with nets), or head off the salt flats and tidal pools of the Bahía de Cádiz and Huelva, where fishermen still use ancient techniques to catch their prey.

The close and direct contact with nature that caravanning offers you is just one of its big attractions. And Andalusia has a lot to offer in this regard, with more than 30% of the territory under one form or another of environmental protection. It has nine Biosphere Reserves, three national and twenty-four natural parks, more than 64 million olive trees that form the largest humanised forest in the world, and natural gems such as the Gorafe Desert, the Sierra Morena (the largest starlight destination in the world) and the largest visible geode on the planet (Pulpi).

Come and see the region's enormous natural wealth, from the wetlands of Doñana (the largest ecological reserve in Europe) to the high peaks of Sierra Nevada, a trued botanical paradise; admire the Spanish firs of the Sierra de Grazalema, or the volcanic landscape of Cabo de Gata, the Bosques de Cobre in the Valle del Genal or the Sierra de Aracena. These spaces also offer unique and unexpected eco-active experiences and activities: see whales in the Straits of Gibraltar, lose yourself in the stone labyrinth of the Cerro del Hierro (Sierra Norte de Sevilla), go paragliding in the Sierra de Segura, fly in a balloon over the Geoparque de Granada or marvel at the heavens at Torcal de Antequera.
