Huelva

Covering an area of some 10,000 square kilometres from open beaches to lush caves, Huelva marks the frontier between Spain and Portugal. It enjoys an agreeable climate, with mild temperatures all year round, and the quality of the light is very special in itself.

With a rich, varied landscape, its traditions and gastronomy make Huelva a unique destination, a place to delve into a land of discoveries.

The improvement in communications has contributed to increasing the number of visitors who come to appreciate the many attractions of the province. The nearby international airports in Seville and Faro, and the excellent road and rail networks have brought it much closer to the rest of Spain, Europe, and the world as a whole.

Nature and Active Tourism

Nature has been generous. To the province of Huelva and its province’s three counties, protected natural areas. These include the Natural and National Parks of Doñana, which make the largest single protected area in Europe, and El Rocio, in the Guadalquivir Delta, one of the most important wetlands in Europe.

In the natural area of Doñana National Park, there are various kinds of flora and fauna, from the large mammals and the natural landscapes, the unique natural conditions with the combination of marshlands, dunes, oaks, sycamores, and pelicans with which to enjoy and learn about species such as the Iberian lynx, the Imperial eagle, and the black vulture.

The beaches of Huelva, among them some 120 kilometres of coastline, are another major attraction, and the province has one of the highest densities of coastal development in Spain, which guarantees that visitors can enjoy numerous coastal beaches.
